

He Is Coming: The Haunting, True Story of Jerome Miller, the Exorcist's Last Case

Jerome Miller was an exorcist. He had been called to perform exorcisms on many people over the years, but none as terrifying as the case of David. David was a young boy who was possessed by a demon. The demon tormented David, causing him to levitate, speak in tongues, and vomit up objects. Miller tried to exorcise the demon, but it was too powerful. The demon told Miller that it was coming for him, and that it would not stop until it had destroyed him.

Miller was terrified. He knew that the demon was powerful, and that it was only a matter of time before it came for him. He tried to protect himself, but it was no use. The demon was always there, lurking in the shadows, waiting for its chance to attack.

One night, Miller was sleeping in his bed when he heard a noise. He woke up and saw the demon standing in the doorway. The demon was smiling, and its eyes were glowing red. Miller knew that this was the end. The demon had come for him, and it was going to kill him.

Miller tried to fight back, but it was no use. The demon was too powerful. It grabbed Miller and threw him across the room. Miller's body hit the wall with a sickening thud. The demon then walked over to Miller and began to choke him.

Miller's life was flashing before his eyes. He could see his childhood, his family, and his friends. He could see all the good times he had had, and all the bad times he had endured. He could see it all, and he knew that it was all over.

Just as Miller was about to lose consciousness, he heard a voice. It was the voice of God. God told Miller that he was not alone, and that he would protect him.

Miller felt a surge of hope. He knew that God was with him, and that he would not let the demon harm him.

Miller closed his eyes and waited for the demon to kill him. But the demon never came. Miller opened his eyes and saw that the demon was gone. He was safe.

Miller got up and walked over to the window. He looked out and saw that the sun was rising. He knew that he had been given a new chance at life, and that he would never forget the experience he had had.

Miller went on to become a successful exorcist. He helped many people over the years, and he never forgot the case of David. The case of David taught him that even the most powerful demons can be defeated with the help of God.
